Case Study:

Disaster recovery that helps you sleep at night

PERSEUS MINING IS AN AFRICAN GOLD PRODUCER, DEVELOPER, AND EXPLORER. THE BUSINESS HAS FOUR OFFICES AND THREE OPERATING MINE SITES ACROSS CÔTE D'IVOIRE AND GHANA.

The ASX-listed business identified the need for a new disaster recovery (DR) system when their legacy DR system was failing to replicate data, reporting wasn't accurate, there were increasing management overheads trying to fix failing backups, and there was limited DR capacity available for use.

Challenge

- The new BCDR system needed to be deployed across multiple remote locations, factoring in poor internet conditions on site.
- The system needed to be deployed with minimal disruption to operations.
- Perseus Mining had worked with another partner who was unable to deliver a solution. The estimated cost of this BCDR system was $250k, with a six month rollout.

Solution

- A solution in collaboration with Datto that cost less than $10k per month, with rollout that would take less than two months and deliver better outcomes.
- An easy to manage "traffic light" system for all backups.
- Daily automated DR testing at all locations, providing peace of mind the system will work in the event of a real disaster.
- Accurate reporting.
- A simple, scalable solution that can be easily replicated across new locations and acquisitions.

Even to this day, I'm sceptical about how it works so well. It seems too good to be true. Having had so many other backup systems in place in previous roles, this is the first one that does what it says and has had the least amount of management overhead to achieve the required outcome.

– Stacey Squire, Group Technology Manager at Perseus Mining
